

We all know that the manufacturing industry in North America more than ever must reinvent itself. We are at different levels already involved in a process of continuous improvement. Often linked to an international philosophy, lean continuous improvement requires an open mind and a questioning of our internal practices.

In collaboration with the company internal resources, Mobil.id is able to conduct case studies in the area of tooling and production equipment. Our goal, is to make sure you make the best decision to achieve your goals.

These case studies can combine, the diagnostic problems, feasibility reports and cost analysis.