1-Identify the problem. Either the lack or gap between what exists and what is desired.

2-Identify the desired result. Product or service you deliver to meet your need.

3-Evaluate the resources available to complete the project. (human, material, financial)

4-Identify resistance and adaptations for the people concerned within the company during the implementation of the project.

5-Make sure of the support of the people involved in the company before beginning the design phase and project design. To achieve this let them express themselves early in the project by offering them to participate in the initial brainstorming sessions.
